CHICAGO, July 2008 – The Alliance of Merger and Acquisitions Advisors hosted the “Working Capital Panel Discussion” at the Wyndham Hotel in Chicago today. Tim Rhine, a partner in MidasNation and founding partner of PointeBreak Solutions, a private investment bank in San Diego, moderated the panel of business professionals from private equity groups in a discussion of how working capital is viewed in a transaction by acquirers.

“Understanding how the acquirers or private investment bankers view corporate value in a market value world is essential to understanding private capital markets,” said Mr. Rhine. “Business owners, managers, professional advisors and stakeholders who understand these concepts drive company value.”

Mr. Rhine is a private business owner and investment banker with over 30 years experience in the ownership, management, operation and finance of majority and minority-owned business entities. He was the issuer, general partner, operating manager, trustee or tax matters partner of 27 limited partnerships; was a co-founder, Chief Operations and Financial Officer of an offshore manufacturing company; served as the President of a specialty retail grocery store chain and was the Chief Executive Officer of an agricultural company operating in five states and three countries. He acts as an advisor to privately held businesses, has provided Financial Literacy and Private Capital Markets presentations to the Institute of Managerial Accountants, the Institute of Management Consultants and other professional organizations. He is a Certified Merger & Acquisition Advisor and holds a Master’s degree from Southern Illinois University.

MidasNation is a gathering place for America’s private businesses, creating opportunities for private business owners to learn how to build value into their companies. The organization’s mentoring and instructional programs leverage the insights of successful private businesses owners and the theory and practices of private capital markets.
